Introduction

The Residential Rehabilitation Providers Group (RRPG) was convened by the Scottish Recovery Consortium who recognised the key role of residential rehabilitation within an integrated approach to services for people affected by drugs and alcohol.

This followed on from the National Policy Rights, Respect and Recovery, which outlined the expectations to ensure that:

Scotland is a country where “we live long, healthy and active lives regardless of where we come from” and where individuals, families, and communities:

- have the right to health and life - free from the harms of alcohol and drugs
- are treated with dignity and respect
- are fully supported within communities to find their own type of recovery

The RRPG is open to all providers in Scotland and has managed to bring a wider understanding across the sector of the range of services provided and the complex structures which support these services.

The Scottish Government (Residential Rehabilitation – service mapping report-2019 to2020) has produced some initial analysis of the sector and identified the different financial structures, the combination of charitable non-profit organisations alongside profit making businesses and the range and depth of service provision. Characteristic too of the sector is the diversity of philosophical and theoretical underpinnings and how these are applied in practice.

The recent funding uplift has led to an increased demand for residential rehabilitation. It has however become apparent that the residential rehabilitation providers have a responsibility to better inform individuals, families and commissioners about the scope and depth of the provision in Scotland. There have been earlier initiatives within the RRPG to provide some information through the Prison to Rehabilitation Protocol and the Guide to Best Practice in Residential Rehabilitation. These papers attempt to provide information on the specific services, including intervention models and treatment approaches, within a number of residential rehabilitation services.

It is important to recognise the complex nature of residential provision in Scotland and note that this paper has been the product of high levels of cooperation and mutual support across all the contributing providers. Similarly, the value of people in recovery and the contribution they make to residential rehabilitation services cannot be underestimated.

As a collective group of residential rehabilitation providers in Scotland, the RPPG is clear that while residential rehabilitation is a key feature in enabling individuals to manage their recovery, it is one component part of a continuum of recovery services across Scotland. Residential rehabilitation is an appropriate response for a relatively small number of people and is an important intervention within their recovery pathway and the wider recovery services. In addition, there is a recognition that the level of change for individuals in moving to live within a residential rehabilitation setting is significant.

There is a developing awareness of the requirement to focus on the process of preparation prior to admission, for ongoing continuity and support during the residential period and subsequent preparation for return to the community. Within the policy context residential rehabilitation plays an important role in supporting the National Mission and the Medically Assisted Treatment (MAT) Standards.

The increased emphasis on informed choice and the range of models of care should be incorporated within the process of preparation for admission within residential rehabilitation. This should be accompanied by open access to independent advocacy at every stage of an individual's journey. The development of joint working with community-based services offers the opportunity to improve the standard of care for individuals and further embed the MAT Standards across all services.

Individuals affected by problematic substance use are complex and can present with a range of issues including mental ill health, physical health, domestic violence and adverse childhood or adult experiences. Individuals may be engaged with several different structures and systems to support their range of complex issues. Care and support systems are a protective factor, as identified within the Hard Edges report[1], and can reduce the risk of harm associated with problematic substance use

The Recovery and Residential Providers Group collectively recognise and support the approach of ensuring a coordinated and consistent delivery of psycho-social and psychological interventions across the drug and alcohol sector in Scotland. We welcome the LPASS practice matrix and LPASS 2018[2] paper on interventions and support their consistent application across Scotland.

Residential providers in Scotland deliver a range of both medical and non-medical approaches and have a long history of providing effective psycho-social interventions. Common to most residential rehabilitation is the opportunity to benefit from a community setting with the opportunity to provide communal peer support as well as more specialist one to one interventions as required for individual residents. The long-standing efficacy of this approach and the expertise of staff in delivering it are at the very heart of how residential establishments offer a pathway towards wellness and recovery.

There is a clear recognition of the primacy of a Human Rights approach within residential rehabilitation. This has been reiterated repeatedly within the policy statements and forms a fundamental cornerstone of Rights, Respect and Recovery. Residential rehabilitation providers are aware of the limited time they have to care for and support individuals. This can involve learning skills which others take for granted and which their fractured development has left behind. Examples of this would include budgeting and managing finances, maintaining a home and personal care. Learning these skills is necessary to support the individual in meeting their most basic needs required for living safely in the community. The primary purpose of residential rehabilitation involves supporting and enabling the individual to manage the transition to living drug free in the community. This will involve supporting individuals to develop a range of skills which can be used to maintain an abstinent lifestyle when they leave.

Residential rehabilitation providers have a clear a focus on helping individuals prepare for returning to the community. This will involve close liaison and planning with community- based services and recovery networks.

Increasingly however residential providers are developing post-discharge services for individuals who recognise the value of the support and care they have received. This can include the provision of individual support as well as mutual aid groups run within a residential location.

The central focus however is in building resilience and sustainability in order to maintain a substance free lifestyle beyond the period of the residential stay. This can incorporate a range of approaches defined within the heading of Psycho-Social support. This paper provides information on the range and models adopted by each residential rehabilitation service identified.

It should be noted that while most organisations are available to men and women the provision of specific residential rehabilitation services for women are limited.

Governance

The Care Inspectorate are the primary body responsible for the inspection of residential rehabilitation services. This provides a welcome level of oversight however it should be noted that not all of the providers within Scotland come within the jurisdiction of the Care Inspectorate.

Staff Development

Any delivery framework is dependent on the skills, experience, and knowledge of the workforce. Staff within residential establishments bring a high level of skills and expertise to this area. Many staff have lived experience and the level of insight which this brings is important in developing a genuine empathetic approach. There is however limited opportunity for the development of staff in a way which emphasises the unique nature and the skills required to work in a residential rehabilitation specific setting. In order to develop consistency of practice, common standards and clear expectations, workforce development is crucial in improving the whole system, locality service provision, and improved outcomes for communities in Scotland. There is further scope for the development of leadership and management frameworks that are critical to ensure the creation of skilled and experience leaders to drive forward the National Mission.

2. Alternatives/Safe as Houses

Our therapeutic programme content has been developed with advice and content support from external experts using the Therapeutic Community model. This model recognises the complexity of the human experience and the limitations of pinpointing one causal factor. It allows us to consider developments in the biological, medical, and genetic fields.

We use evidence based behavioural treatments taking into account personality differences and the emotional functioning of individuals. These are framed within socio-cultural theories of behaviour.

There are three determinants: drug; set; and setting: “Drug (the pharmacological action of the substance itself), set (the attitude of the person at the time of use, including his personality structure), and setting (the influence of the physical and social setting within which the use occurs. Zinberg, 1984)

The underlying philosophy of the programme is based on Baumrind’s Authoritative parenting style. The programme teaches personal responsibility through groupwork and community living utilising the strengths of Peer champions. Residents are treated with compassion, care and respect, encouraging development of personal and group responsibility.

The model incorporates a full continuum of care – a programme from chaos to sustainability – a further developing programme from stability to abstinence – and a final programme maintaining recovery.

2. Alternatives/Safe as Houses

The main house has capacity for 16 people, 8 spaces for stabilisation and a further 8 for abstinence. This is further enhanced by 8 scatter flats providing accommodation for a further 16 people, facilitating a peer led recovery and citizenship programme utilising our social enterprise initiatives and leading to the establishment of Lived Experience Recovery Organisations. This model empowers the individual to take personal responsibility and follows a rights based approach to delivery of services.

We support both males and females seeking this support. Residents each have a caseworker and weekly 1 to 1 sessions. Assessment and keywork based around the 10 Recovery Outcome Measures[1], Citizenship and meaningful activity alongside holistic and alternative therapies such as acupuncture and aromatherapy.

There is an ongoing emphasis put on learning personal responsibilities through peer led activities and peer led groupwork. Residents progress through structured incremental progression from Foundation to Intermediate to Senior peer. Residents progress through the stages based on their ability to demonstrate healthy engagement with the programme, their willingness to support others, their level of personal responsibility and proactive role in group responsibility.

Several external activities are incorporated into the weekly programme such as visits to local recovery cafes, mutual aid 12 step fellowship meetings, hill walking and cycling. Alternatives hold 15 acres of greenfield site allowing residents to experience recovery through nature. Alternatives also mentor a Heritage Community based project Skylark IX Recovery Trust (Dunkirk Little Ship conservation programme) which supports “recovery through recovery” via a skill based boat- building project.

- To promote the prevention of drug and/or alcohol related problems.
- By providing a holistic, needs-led support to our service users that is tailored to the
- individual, we provide help and support to ensure that each of our SU have the tools needed to overcome their addiction and its related issues, so they can fulfil their potential and live positive futures.

As a faith-based organisation we believe that there is a spiritual element to recovery and believe that successful recovery must address this as well as the physical, psychological and social needs of each individual.

7. Haven

The programme

The Haven Kilmacolm believes it's more than just becoming drug free and takes a holistic approach to wellbeing – physical, spiritual and psychological. There is an initial induction period of one month for new service users during which time they are cared for and assisted through their detox if required. Following a successful induction, service users commence

Phase 1 of the programme

Progress from one phase to the next is based on an assessment of an individual's progress as measured against their agreed personal development plan (PDP). The PDP is used in support sessions with their Support Worker to plan their progress, providing a tool for discussion throughout the programme. During the programme our service users will work through group studies that teach biblical principles and practical applications for daily living and drug prevention. As well as the spiritual and the psychological support we have a fully kitted out Gym and a 4G 5 a'side pitch to help support and encourage our SUs to look after their physical wellbeing.

8. Hebrides Alpha

The Hebrides Alpha Project provides the only residential recovery facility in the Western Isles of Scotland. Serving a community of approximately 27k people from The Butt of Lewis to the small island of Vatersay. We have a six-bed unit which has four spaces for men and two for women. This facility is staffed by five full time support workers, and four relief staff.

The aim of the project is to provide a service for persons aged 18+, seeking to recover from alcohol, drug, related problems and to assist them to become confident, responsible, and valued members of the local community.

Hebrides Alpha Project is an abstinence based supported accommodation service. We run a program which has both in-house and external recovery meetings. Our residents are regularly signposted to whatever groups may be of benefit to them in their own circumstances. We aim to get all residents into some form of employment or volunteering while in the project and if this is not possible for whatever reason we have a Polycrub adjacent to the buildings which offers a space for growing and for taking part in various art projects.

Our aim is that we support people to grow in multiple life skills through recovery, so that they are ready to go to their own tenancy and have options for work. Residents are encouraged to stay for six months and have the option of up to twelve months. It is in those timescales where we see a far higher percentage of people remaining abstinent. The program is then followed up with six months of aftercare for those who have completed the program. It is possible for detox to take place within the project under the supervision of the local drug and alcohol nurses. The project has a strong working relationship with other services such as GPs, CPN's, homeless services, housing services, pharmacies to name but a few. Currently all staff within the project have lived experience and are trained to SVQ3 for support workers and SVQ4 in leadership and management for the managers. All staff are trauma informed.

The Hebrides Alpha Project is faith based, and we recognise that some persons seeking recovery may not wish to consider this aspect of becoming well as being important or relevant to their own lives. They may even have alternative ideas in terms of faith. This to us is no barrier to anyone coming into the project. All are welcome regardless of personal persuasion.

We use several approaches as part of our therapeutic recovery program. Residents who are not in some form of employment or volunteering would receive three 1-1 sessions per week, following methods based on the principles of CBT and motivational interviewing. We also use 12 step, and the Life Recovery Bible.

8. Hebrides Alpha

Those who are working, or volunteering would have two of these sessions per week. There are two in-house group meetings every week which are compulsory, and also a range of external meetings in community which residents attend.

We recognise that there is not a one cap fits all solution to recovery, and that everyone is on their own journey. We therefore try to work with each resident based on their own strengths and particular needs.

9. Jericho House, Dundee (hereafter Jericho Dundee)

The Jericho Society offer a range of services across the UK to anyone who find themselves left vulnerable due to addiction, domestic violence or homelessness. Jericho Dundee is the Society's residential rehabilitation centre for the treatment of alcoholism and offers 12 self-contained studio flats for those wishing to undergo treatment for their addiction.

We offer Twelve Step Facilitation based on holistic, person-centred principles around the fundamental philosophy of the 12-step model of recovery as well as a range of therapeutic inputs, including CBT and Trauma counselling via weekly sessions.

Each individual is assessed in a needs-focused way and a holistic support plan is formulated to meet those needs, which are often complex. Each support plan is developed to address the causes and conditions of a resident's maladaptive behaviours including Trauma and Adverse Childhood Experiences, with a view to help develop new, healthy ways of managing thinking and feelings.

There are 9 members of staff including volunteers and our weekly programme consists of morning orientation meetings, AA attendance and integration, 3 key worker one-to-one sessions per week, gratitude tasks, sports activities, walking groups and events calendar. We have a drama therapy group facilitated by Dundee Repertory Theatre that culminates in a live show performed by the residents annually.

We have an education programme that focuses on literacy and numeracy, basic food and hygiene skills run by the HSCP / Local Authority learning needs organisation; a Family Programme based around a weekly meeting on a Tuesday evening; we facilitate counselling at the level appropriate to an individual's needs and readiness, have two certificate level counsellors on-site each week as well as a weekly clinic with a registered CPN for specialist support. All residents must be registered with Jericho's neighbouring medical practice.

We do not currently run an in-house detox programme but partner with Abbeycare for the provision of such services prior to the individual transferring to Dundee.

Jericho Dundee works in partnership with Substance Misuse Managers (bi-monthly), ADP's (across staff teams), MHSU group pathway development, HIS pathways, Street Soccer and local authorities.

9. Jericho Dundee

Our staff team incorporate Lived Experience of Addiction and Recovery with the majority also having rehabilitated in Jericho Houses. Staff are trained to minimum SVQ 3 level and go through mandatory 'Seeking Safety' model of addressing Trauma within addiction, they are trained in counselling skills with COSCA, BACP and practice CBT at L1 in Transactional Analysis, Person Centred Counselling, CBT (Ellis and Beck), Naloxone trained. 10. Jericho Houses – Greenock

The Jericho Society has two separate residential rehabilitation Houses in Greenock, an 18 bed Unit for men and a 10 bed unit for women.

The Jericho House programme has evolved over a period of over 30 years. This evolution has involved discernment, by staff, of what has been beneficial to service users and also what has not worked in previous abstinence based rehabilitation centers they have worked in. All staff are trained in accordance with Recovery Oriented Systems of Care and we are fully accountable to the ROSC framework. Assessments, Care Plans and Reviews encompass all 10 ROSC elements. Regulation is by The Care Inspectorate (CS2009198981)

Each individual is assessed in a needs focused way and a holistic support plan is formulated to meet their needs which are often complex. Each support plan has a common need to be met which is to address the causes and conditions of their addiction including Trauma and Adverse Childhood Experiences, with a view to adopting new healthy ways of managing thinking and feelings without resorting to drug use. In summary, through key-working and group work we assist in service users maturation process.

Activity plans incorporate a minimum of 6 hours per week of staff-facilitated groups and 2 hours of senior peer-facilitated groups. Initially on entry we encourage dependence on staff with a view to shifting through inter-dependence to independence prior to mutually planning their resettlement back into the community. Everyone is accountable for building an extensive abstinence based network of support in the community during their stay, accessed through mutual aid fellowships.

Minimum stay is for six months, extendable according to need. Average stay for successful Rehabilitation is between 7 and 11 months.

Although not affiliated with Narcotics Anonymous, service users are encouraged to attend meetings and also adopt the altruistic way of life available there, by working through a 12 Step Programme. Our abstinence based House programme has an emphasis on personal responsibility. The group work has a structured process encompassing 'Problem – Solution – Action'.

Conflict resolution has priority as we believe that personal recovery is dependent on House unity. We also facilitate a weekly Family Support Group in Port Glasgow Town Hall, where our residents from both Houses, their families and any family members from the surrounding communities, attend together for support and to address any co-dependency issues.

10. Jericho Houses – Greenock

Jericho Society does not provide detox, however we have a partnership with Abbeycare, where individuals can go through detox at Abbeycare and transfer to Jericho for the remainder of treatment.

Both staff teams incorporate Lived Experience of Addiction and Recovery, with the majority also having Rehabilitated in Jericho Houses. Staff are trained to minimum SVQ 3 level and go through mandatory 'Seeking Safety' model of addressing Trauma, within addiction. Senior staff have SVQ4s in 'Leadership and Management' and 'Health and Social Care' Staff also have a full range of additional appropriate training including Motivational Interviewing, CBT, Child Protection, Working with Vulnerable Adults, ROSC, Co-dependency, Transactional Analysis and Person Centred Counselling.

In addition to the Core Staff teams, there is an EMDR Trauma specialist and CBT diploma level students run a 12 week CBT-informed course using evidence based techniques. They have an ongoing relationship with the Centre of Therapy in Glasgow to accept student placements.

All residents are assessed for numeracy, literacy and IT skills at the beginning of their stay and are expected to participate in a two hour weekly group to improve their respective skills if this is required, with SQA certificated courses.

Each resident's care plan is created collaboratively and in a person-centred way with flexibility to accommodate differing levels of literacy.

Jericho collects data around the 10 Recovery Outcome Measures[1]

Rebuilding of Family Relationships is also a Core element of our programme.

11. LEAP (Lothian & Edinburgh Abstinence Programme)

LEAP operates a therapeutic community model of treatment with the addition of other elements including cognitive behavioural therapy (CBT), 12-step facilitation, drama therapy and family therapy.

The programme, which is open to Lothian residents, has a highly-structured format where individuals who seek abstinence live together in an organised, supportive fashion which promotes change and increases the chance of long term recovery. There is a timetabled daily routine with individuals participating in group therapy, sharing meals, undertaking therapeutic tasks and offering support to fellow peers.

Patients have access to a broad range of practitioners in the multidisciplinary team, including specialist GPs, a psychiatrist, a psychologist, a pharmacist, mental health and general nurses, therapists, and an occupational therapist. There is a high level of lived experience in the team and the service employs six lived-experience peer workers as well as supporting 20 volunteer peer supporters who offer help/support to patients going through treatment. LEAP works in partnership with housing officers, housing support staff and education, training and employability specialist staff whom patients have access to/support from.

LEAP offers detox from alcohol, opioids, benzodiazepines, prescription medication and supports patients through cocaine and cannabis withdrawal. Complex detoxes are managed through the Ritson Inpatient Detoxification Unit where there are four beds dedicated for LEAP patients. Therapeutic and medical care plans are developed for each patient. A full medical assessment takes place on admission and a pharmacist reviews current prescribed medication. Functional assessments are conducted by a specialist occupational therapist.

The service sits within an integrated system of care which allows referrals to specialist health services to address unmet health needs including contraception, sexual health screening, dental care and blood borne virus and liver disease treatment. Naloxone distribution, overdose prevention and BBV testing are offered/delivered. There are five prescribers in the LEAP team.

LEAP is funded on NHS principles – free at point of delivery, so patients do not have to seek funding for rehab. Referrals can be made by any professional to the service. Patients attend information sessions prior to admission and once engaged in assessment will attend a three month rolling programme of preparation for rehab.

11. LEAP (Lothian & Edinburgh Abstinence Programme)

LEAP takes a 'whole family approach' offering group and individual support to family members. The service links patients into recovery community supports like lived experience recovery organisations and mutual aid in order to build recovery capital before, during and after treatment.

Complimentary practitioners deliver art therapy, massage, Tai Chi, and storytelling interventions. A drama session takes place once a week. LEAP have four staff certified (and supervised) to deliver CBT to current and aftercare patients and interventions focussed on stabilisation of trauma symptoms.

Two years of aftercare are offered. This includes several groups across the week including special groups for women and for those who have lapsed or relapsed. LEAP also offers CBT therapy for aftercare patients where appropriate. The service supports a recovery house for homeless men following treatment in partnership with City of Edinburgh council.

Most patients who complete treatment go onto engage with Encompass (Access to Industry) which provides pathways into training, education and employment.

Individual therapeutic work supports understanding of lasting impact of trauma and development of adaptive behaviours (phase 2 & 3). Psychology and psychiatry reviews are available and planning can be done to ensure ongoing support/therapy for trauma. All staff are participate in trauma training led by NHS Lothian specialist psychologists meeting the criteria for 'trauma skilled' practice.

The service follows the matched care model outlined by LPASS: Supporting documents - Substance misuse services: delivery of psychological interventions - gov.scot (www.gov.scot). Patients generally access tiers 1-2/3 during the treatment programme and tier 4 interventions are accessed during aftercare to ensure safety and stability is established. Tier 4 interventions are only provided by the clinical psychologist and specialist CBT therapists.

Abstinence is one of the goals set by LEAP patients, but improved quality of life, better mental health, stronger community connections, healthier relationships and robust physical health are also important goals. The service has had its patients one year outcomes published in a peer reviewed scientific journal evidencing the significant benefits associated with residential rehab and will soon publish four year outcomes.

15. Turning Point Scotland

(Crisis Unit and Stabilisation Service, Glasgow, Moving On, Turnaround and 218)

Turning Point Scotland currently delivers five residential services which all offer support within a psychologically informed environment. The aim of these services is stabilisation although we can deliver abstinence-focused services and have in the past. All five of the services provide evidence based psychosocial treatment and interventions based on LPASS guidance. Four of the services provide integrated health and social care models which include detox, stabilisation on MAT (Medically Assisted Treatment), clinical support, and housing support, these services operate in line with the MAT Standards. The fifth service operates a community based housing support model. All five services have staff with lived experience of alcohol and other drugs and three of them have paid Peer Support Practitioners. All services connect service users to local recovery communities and TPS Connects which is led by volunteers with lived experience.

The principles of Citizenship inform all TPS services. Citizenship is founded on the work of Michael Rowe of Yale University, and adapted by TPS to meet the needs of Scotland. It is based on the key themes of identity, a valued social role and a sense of belonging. In particular, this allows us to consider the different identities people take on e.g. within a family or through their recovery journey; the different roles which people play e.g. as someone being supported, a volunteer or a peer worker; and importantly belonging to a community and overcoming the stigma they might encounter.

Turning Point Scotland takes a holistic approach to promoting the recovery, self-determination and inclusion of people accessing services. We do this by focusing on their strengths and the valued contributions they can make to their communities. The approach acknowledges the stigma attached to the reasons that bring people to services for support: citizenship is strengthened by developing a positive identity and through the experience of belonging and value to communities and society. This introduces residents to their rights and responsibilities; it assists them to find meaning and purpose in their lives out with old 'using' social networks.

- All services provide CBT, Motivational Interviewing, Mindfulness and Trauma Informed Care.
- TPS collect data on planned and unplanned discharges.
- All staff qualified to a minimum of SVQ3 or are Registered Nurses
- Managers SVQ 4/5 Leadership
- All staff SSSE registered
- TPS has in house training and CPD provision (Step in, step on, step up)

18. Turning Point (Turnaround)

(Crisis Unit and Stabilisation Service, Glasgow, Moving On, Turnaround and 218)

The Turnaround service delivers focussed services that address the complex and interrelated issues of offending behaviour and problematic use of alcohol and other drugs. The service was redesigned in 2018 to include a Throughcare model. Prior to admission to the residential programme, individuals undertake a programme of preparatory work facilitated by the Throughcare team.

Individuals are assessed for immediate risk and immediate need. A comprehensive assessment builds on the issues and needs identified through the referral process and helps staff understand the full nature of challenges affecting an individual's offending behaviour and the support required.

The residential programme is a 6-8 week stay, and is very structured with individuals expected to engage in all aspects of daily activities, groups and one to one sessions. Following the residential programme, the Throughcare team offer additional support within the community for a period of up to 12 weeks to facilitate links with community based support.

20. Turning Point (Moving On)

(Crisis Unit and Stabilisation Service, Glasgow, Moving On, Turnaround and 218)

Operational since 2007

Our Turning Point Scotland Glasgow Housing Support service provides temporary accommodation for individuals who have taken initial steps to address their alcohol and drug use and need housing support. Many individuals come directly from stabilisation service. Some from the Crisis service, or Criminal Justice.

Since 2007, we have proudly partnered with Glasgow Homeless Partnership and Glasgow Addiction Service to ensure that everybody has access to a tenancy. We believe that if any of us have a home it can provide a sense of belonging, increase feelings of self-worth and make a person feel part of their community.

Over the last 13 years, many people have been supported to find something in their life which is meaningful to them. This can be through voluntary work, education or employment. The emphasis is always on what the individual wishes to have in their life, at a time when they are ready for it.

- 24/7 Support from social care staff
- 10 flats open to citizens of Glasgow
- 12 – 24 weeks
- Works with males, females and couples over 18 years
